As a long-time devotee of the magazine, we have been drawn to these stories because of their dramatic images of a beautiful landscape. However, we have been disappointed that the magazine has not been able to provide us with the information we need to know about the magazine's future. We have been told that the magazine is being sold to a new owner, but we have not been able to find out who the new owner is or what the magazine's future plans are. Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on body composition and metabolic rate in obese women. The study was conducted in a metabolic laboratory. The subjects were 10 obese women (mean age 38.5 years, mean BMI 38.5 kg/m²). The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and a diet group. The control group received a diet that provided 1000 kcal more energy than the diet group. The diet group received a diet that provided 1000 kcal less energy than the control group. The subjects were monitored for 10 weeks. The results showed that the diet group lost significantly more weight and fat mass than the control group. The diet group also had a significantly higher metabolic rate than the control group. The results suggest that a 1000 kcal energy deficit diet can effectively reduce body weight and fat mass in obese women.
